

Blue Eyes

Who is hiding here?

Look carefully! Do you find us?

In this terrarium live Australian green tree frogs, which are very good at camouflage. They hide in the dense foliage and are not always visible. As tree frogs they have adhering toes and are very good climbers. Look therefore also further above!

Australian green tree frogs live in Australia and New Guinea and now also in parts of the USA and New Zealand. The plants in the terrarium create a rainforest-like habitat – very humid and very warm. You can read temperature and humidity on the gauges in the terrarium.

The frogs in this terrarium are all from offspring in Germany and were not taken from their natural habitat.

Unlike our native frogs, the Australian green tree frogs are active all year round and do not hibernate.

If you look closely, you can see why these Australian green tree frogs are called "Blue Eyes" – they have blue eyes.
